Seven Years War 1759 (Oct 22): Entire letter written from John Dunnett at Crown Point, north of Fort Ticonderoga on Lake Champlain, addressed to Capt. John Sutherland of Forres, Caithness via Edinburgh, Scotland cancelled in transit by fine "NEW / YORK" handstamp in red ink, charged in manuscript "IN10" (1s. 10d.), with 1s. for the Packet rate and 10d. internal charge. A fascinating letter: "General Amherst has given us short warning of a Pacquet's going to Britain...I shall only inform you that the Campaign is over and all your friends and acquaintances in this Army are healthy. When we get into winter quarters I will write you whole sheets of paper. General Amherst with all the regulars in his Army, embarked at this place on the 11th instant, with a view to drive the French from the Isle de Noix and St. John's and so penetrate into the heart of Canada...The story of Quebec's being reduced (Sept 13, 1759) General Wolfe's death and all other circumstances of that interesting conquest, you will undoubtedly have before this arrives...". A splendid and historic entire.

Note: Isle de Noix fell to the British in August 1760. The last French Governor-General of New France, Pierre François de Rigaud, Marquis de Vaudreuil-Cavagnal, surrendered to the British under General Amherst on September 8, 1760.

- 4002 1765 (June 29): Entire letter from Boston to Shelter Island, Long Island, New York with manuscript on flap "Via New London (Connecticut) to the care of Gordon Saltenstall, a Kegg of Salmon and a bundle" and, on the right hand flap "Forwarded by yr. servants, N.L. July 19, 1765, G. Saltonstall". The cover is addressed to Thomas Dering (1720-1785), Attorney, a delegate to the Third Provisional Congress in New York and former supervisor of Shelter Island, the Forwarding Agent being the son of Gordon Saltonstall, Governor of Connecticut 1707-1724. A fine and most appealing entire with contents stating "as to trade, every day looks like Sunday".

Andrew Oliver

Jared Ingersoll Sr.

- 4003 1766 (July 31): Entire letter from Boston via Hartford to New Haven marked on front panel "1.8" in manuscript (1 penny-weight, 8 grains of silver) the equivalent of 8d. sterling (and the rate for under 60 miles from Hartford to New Haven), with, on reverse a superb strike of two line "HART / FORD" handstamp in black: only recorded in use from 1766 to 1772. This handstamp was made in England and supplied by the General Post Office. A superb strike - a magnificent rarity in the foremost quality.
Note: The sender, Andrew Oliver became Lt. Governor of Massachusetts in 1770. He was hanged in effigy (and his home and office ransacked) for his support of the vastly unpopular Stamp Act and for accepting the office of Distributor of Stamps, even though he was privately against it. The addressee, Jared Ingersoll was a Connecticut Stamp Agent and Judge of the Court of the Admiralty: his son, also named Jared (1749-1822) was a lawyer and statesman from Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. He was a delegate to the Continental Congress and a signator of the United States Constitution.

- 4005 1770c.: Cover from London to Edenton, North Carolina endorsed at lower left "Pp. Capt. Q.D.C." (Whom God Preserve) and rated in manuscript "IN2" (1 shilling 2d.) in ink for 1s. Packet rate and 2d. for local fee, struck on reverse on arrival with two superlative strikes of the two line "CHARLES / TOWN" handstamp in black, in use from 1769-1776. This handstamp was made in England and supplied by the General Post Office. Flap imperfections but truly exceptional and of great scarcity.

Note: The addressee, Samuel Johnston of Edenton, 1733-1816, was a prominent Patriot, lawyer and the first U.S Senator from North Carolina.

Brigadier General
Anthony Wayne

- 4011 1794 (Oct 11): Entire letter from an English Officer in Detroit via Halifax to London, struck with circular "HALIFAX / N. SCOTIA" datestamp (March 6, 1795) on reverse and, on obverse with framed "AMERICAN INLAND / POSTAGE" handstamp alongside the American (not United States) postage in manuscript of 1/6d., the "Packet Postage" of "1s." with a total charge of "2/6d." to pay. Three London arrival datestamps on reverse (April 20). This entire is illustrated in the Robson Lowe Encyclopaedia on page 370. Exceptional strikes and a remarkable and very rare entire.

Note: The British retained a Fort in Detroit until 1796. The letter's content after noting that building the new Fort at Detroit had made many soldier's ill is fascinating: "War with America has been very much talked of & General Wayne came close to the new Fort, but retreated, perhaps you know with greater certainty in England, what is to happen. The Americans complain very much, and the Indians whom we have always supported will fight no longer without some English Troops....this is the last opportunity of sending a letter to Europe."

In October 1840 mail from Cuba and the Isle of St. Domingo (Hispaniola) ceased to be carried by the Mexican Packet but was transferred to the Leeward Islands service. An outstanding and rare entire.

They have a great deal of senseless pride about them... Consequently there is a great deal of underhand work going on... To speak the candid truth I am sick of Cape Hayti... I have often though there is a particular curse that hangs, if not over this town, at least over the Island... it was from here that the party was sent that surprised Toussaint L'Ouverture and carried him to France, a man, black though he was, that would have done honour to any country. It was in this town that the last of the Frenchmen in this part of the Island were butchered in cold blood by the Haytian Emperor Desalines after guaranteeing their safety..".*

PANAMA

ACROSS THE ISTHMUS FROM THE PACIFIC TO THE ATLANTIC

Experiences of the German businessman C.A. Pajeken on his journeys from San Francisco to Europe via the Isthmus of Panama before and after the opening of the Panama Railway.

Map showing the mule path from Panama to Gorgona (in red) and continuing by boat along the river Chagres (in blue)

By mule from Panama to Chagres (1850)

It was January 1850 when I arrived in Panama on a steamship from San Francisco. There were over four hundred of us passengers. Most were Californian gold miners, many of whom had made the journey across the American prairies and were hardened to privations of all kinds.

As soon as the steamer had anchored, fifty to sixty boats swarmed around from all directions. The boatmen shouted the price of the ferry fare to the passengers, each trying to out-shout the other. After the mail, the express goods and cabin ladies had disembarked, the other passengers, six or eight at a time, got into boats and left the steamer amid the deafening noise.

Panama is situated on land that is not very high above sea level. The city is completely enclosed by low, partly weather-worn city walls, from which a high fortress protrudes on the seaward side. The larger ships must anchor a mile out from the coast. From here, the passengers and their luggage are taken to the beach in boats.

We stayed at the Louisiana Hotel. It was run by an Italian who gave us a good lunch at moderate cost. Then we hired saddle- and pack animals as well as porters for us and our luggage, for which we paid twelve to sixteen dollars for each animal or man from Panama to Gorgona (nine leguas). As this was the dry season we went to Gorgona, which is three leguas below Cruces on the Rio Chagres. The way there goes first through a flat valley, which is covered on both sides with dense bushes and large trees. Many heaps of rubble rise up from the lower heights like ruined castles. These are the ruins of the homes of rich planters who cultivated this area under Spanish rule; the Republic drove them out, destroyed the houses and turned the area into a wilderness.

The road continues to wind through narrow, marshy valleys. Then we crossed a small river where riders, pedestrians and animals eagerly enjoyed a cooling drink, for the sun was already high in the sky and the thermometer already showed 29 degrees in the shade. At three o'clock in the afternoon we reached the plateau of the isthmus, a densely forested plateau where there was a hut made of cane and a linen tent. Our muleteer explained that we would have to spend the night here because we would not be able to reach Gorgona that evening due to the rough road and the poor condition of our animals. We dismounted, put our luggage in a pile and let our animals graze in the shade of the trees. Towards evening we set up camp for the night. Everyone lay down on the grass with their luggage, but sleep was out of the question. With the dawn, packing began again.

Trail from Panama City to Gorgona

On the river Chagres

Before we reached Gorgona, we saw a large, barrack-like building on a cleared height. This was for the workers of the then projected railway. Four hundred Irishmen had come from New York. But after a few weeks half of the workers had died; the other half were sick and unable to work. As day broke, those who had hired boats embarked. I too tried to get boats for myself and my companions. Finally I agreed with a boat owner a price of twelve dollars per person. We then dragged our belongings into the wretched boat, which was loaded almost to the point of sinking with the six passengers, the owner, two oarsmen and our luggage. The journey continued downriver with the current, but the water was so shallow that we often had to get out and pull the boat over the sand. We constantly heard shouting and the sound of shots, for the boatmen and travellers were very noisy. The Americans amused themselves by shooting at birds with revolvers. We had taken some provisions with us from Gorgona. We were able to enjoy our meal in peace during the journey in the shade of a parasol.

When it became too dark to continue without danger we landed at a small village called Gatun. There were thirty to forty boats there with travellers who had come from Gorgona. At three o'clock in the morning, our boat reached Chagres, situated at the mouth of the river of the same name. We pulled our boat ashore and were happy finally to breathe fresh sea air again. When daylight came, we crossed over to the left bank, then known as the American side. There were a number of shacks here, almost all of which were run by American innkeepers. We brought our things ashore, paid the boat owner, had an expensive and poor-quality breakfast and then hired a boat to cross over to the steamship. Our boat was one of the best, four sturdy blacks rowing it through the high surf against the strong north-easterly wind. After half an hour we were standing on the high deck of the steamship "Empire City", which took us to New York in fourteen days, after taking on coal in Kingston, Jamaica.

On the Panama Railway from Panama to Aspinwall (1855)

It was March 1855 when I arrived back in Panama on a return trip from California to make the journey across the Isthmus. But what changes had occurred in those few years! What British and French engineers had declared an impossibility had been accomplished in an unprecedentedly short time by the enterprise of practical Yankees. The railway that had been projected five years ago, connecting the Pacific with the Atlantic, was finished and in operation.

So now, to cross the isthmus has become an enjoyable journey, though admittedly still very expensive because of the Panama Railway Company's monopoly. The fare is twenty-five dollars for each person and ten cents for each pound of luggage (in recent times, fifty pounds of luggage have been accepted). Nevertheless, the journey is cheaper than it was a few years ago, when it was also associated with a great loss of time, much discomfort and many dangers.

The Summit of the Panama Railroad

The small transfer steamboat that was supposed to take us from the ocean steamer directly to the railway was under repair, so we landed in small boats as in earlier times, and then had to walk to the city. Here all the luggage was weighed and the freight charge paid at fifteen cents a pound, for we were still cheated out of five cents. Every little thing was put on the scales; even my weapons and a cage with birds were not exempt. Everything was done with unbelievable speed, and the traveller who had already bought his ticket was treated worse than an item of freight. We then got into the railway carriages, which we liked as there are no classes here. Soon the journey began and we whizzed through the swamps which, apart from the garlic smell of the herbs, gave off a most unpleasant haze. After two hours we stopped on the plateau of the summit, where there were some houses.

Although the stop lasted almost half an hour, no one was allowed to get off to refresh themselves in the great heat. When the conductor was asked how long the train would stop, he replied curtly: "I don't know".

We then arrived at the Rio Chagres. The journey continued a few miles along the left bank, and then the train crossed the river on a very strong wooden bridge. We reached Aspinwall 4½ hours after our departure from Panama. Unfortunately, the steamship "George Law", which was to take us to New York, had not yet arrived. Therefore, our group of four travellers rented a room with four camp beds for twenty-four hours for which we had to pay five dollars. We put our luggage, weapons and menagerie inside and while one of us kept watch, the others enjoyed the fresh sea air.

Railway Bridge on River Chagres

The next morning, the expected steamship arrived and docked at the landing stage. A hundred paces away, the railway stopped and brought six hundred passengers, their luggage, the mail, and much merchandise. The steamship had suffered damage to the engine, which was repaired in a workshop at the end of the railway. Late in the afternoon a cannon was fired as a signal that the passengers could go aboard. We walked on to the ship through an indescribable crowd of porters, passengers, fruit and parrot sellers, pickpockets and agents and proceeded to the designated rooms.

buildings are wooden sheds and there is no sign of railway employees. The carriages are practical and comfortable, the locomotives very large and even magnificent. The station, if you can call the Panama departure point a station, is right next to the sea. The end of the railway on the Atlantic side is directly on the pier, where the steamships load their largely live cargoes.

The Panama Railway, like almost all North American railways of its kind, is not built for the future. Station

The whole length of the railway is 57 miles. The greatest ascent is from the Pacific side to the summit, and is 60 feet in a mile. On the Atlantic side the greatest rise is in the valley of Obispo, near the plateau, where it is 58.9 feet in a mile. The highest point of the line is 263 feet above the mean high tide of the Atlantic Ocean.

The point where the railway reaches the Atlantic side is a few miles east of Chagres (which is now in terminal decline). The town now rising there is called Colon (Columbus) by the inhabitants of New Granada, but the North Americans call it "Aspinwall" after one of the owners of the steamships sailing between there and New York. The town is situated on a promontory or island by the sea on soil which, like the whole valley, consists of sand, broken shells and coral. So far it consists of wooden houses. The mixture of races is almost as great as it was in California at the time of the first mass immigration: Coloureds, Creoles and Mestizos from the coast of New Granada and many West Indian islands, plus North Americans, Spaniards, British, French, Germans, Italians and Jews from all parts of Europe.

Terminus of the Panama Railway Company in Aspinwall

The location of the city of Aspinwall, being the terminus of the railway linking two oceans, justifies the expectation that in the not too distant future it will become one of the most important trading centres of the New World.

- 4159 1867 (Nov 21): Bolivia Condor 5 c. green, a used vertical pair from the original plate, 5th printing, positions 15/27 with large margins all round (Scott 1b) tied to 1867 combination cover from Lamar to Baltimore, USA in combination with Great Britain 1867 1 s. green pl. 4 applied for onward transmission, the Bolivia pair cancelled by light circular LAMAR / FRANCA handstamp in black and the Great Britain 1 s. green cancelled by a fine strike of the "C39" obliterator of the British Postal Agency in Cobija in black, with corresponding single ring COBIJA datestamp below (Nov 21). Struck in transit with circular 'N.Y. STEAMSHIP / 10' (Dec 21) for incoming Ship Letter fee. Minor vertical file fold crosses the lower Condor 5 c. not detracting from the wonderful appearance. This extraordinary cover is, in this describer's opinion, the sole proper combination usage available to philatelists as we believe the ex Dr. Kornan cover, whilst equally fine and attractive, is more of a chance usage where the sender eventually mailed his cover directly from the British Agency in Cobija (photograph of same with the lot); illustrated in Parmenter & Gordon on page 3/6 who state "the only known combination cover serviced by both the Bolivian and British Post Office". A highlight of the collection: this magnificent rarity is one of the greatest covers of both South American and British Postal History extant.

The Lady with the Lamp

Florence Nightingale (1820-1910) was the founder of modern nursing. Nightingale organised care for wounded soldiers at the military hospital on the Asiatic side of the Bosphorus, opposite Constantinople, at Scutari. She became an icon of Victorian culture, especially in the persona of "The lady with the Lamp" making rounds of wounded soldiers at night. During the first winter at Scutari 1854/55, more than 4'000 soldiers died in the war hospital in which she and her team worked. Ten times more soldiers died from illnesses such as typhus, typhoid, cholera and dysentery than from battle wounds. By making hygiene improvements she reduced the death rate from 42% to 2%.

Nightingale gained the nickname "The Lady with the Lamp" from a phrase in THE TIMES: "She is a "ministering angel" without any exaggeration in these hospitals, and her slender form glides quietly along each corridor, every poor fellow's face softens with gratitude at the sight of her. When all the medical officers have retired for the night and silence and darkness have settled down upon theses miles of prostrate sick, she may be observed alone, with a little lamp in her hand, making her solitary rounds"

Central stain from seal but a very rare usage of the 1 d. pink stationery from the Crimea - these envelopes were never sold to the Troops and can only have been carried to the theatre of war privately - just three examples are recorded used in the Crimea, this being the sole example with a 2 d. adhesive.

1856: Cover probably mailed either from the Crimea or, more likely from Constantinople and addressed to London; franked by 1855 1 d. red-brown, wmk. Small Crown perf. 14 and 2 d. blue pl. 4, single example lettered PD and a horizontal strip of four OD-OG all cancelled by ink manuscript from the Crimea/Constantinople to London. Reverse with Malta double arc cds in black (Jan) and London arrival (Jan 21, 1856 but faint strike) in red alongside embossed flap reading "Soyez Ferme" (Be Steadfast) with Dragon vignette of the Hyde family. One 2 d. with small fault but a wonderful and extremely rare cover.

Note: Robson Lowe article accompanies the lot stating January 1855, we however feel the date of the letter to be 1856. The letter was correctly franked with 11d. for the British Packet letter rate to Britain and handed directly to the packet at Constantinople leaving for Malta. The Contract packet employed in conveying the Mails did not, in 1856, have their own numeral cancellator on board, the Mail officer cancelled the adhesives with a wavy pen stroke. Unfortunately the letter missed the P.&O. packet 'ALMA' at Malta (9 January 1856) en route from Alexandria to Southampton by one day. In order not to wait two weeks for the next P.&O. packet leaving Malta for Southampton, the letter was mailed on from Malta on 10 January 1856 by 'Closed Mail' via Marseilles by French Packet which required 1s. 9d. postage. The 11d. prepaid was not accepted as part payment when conveyed by French Packet (Moubrey states "Underpaid: As unpaid"), and therefore taxed as unpaid with '1/9' in black ink to be paid by the recipient on delivery in London.

Another cover dated 31 July 1855 which may confirm the practise of pen-cancelling late letters directly handed to the Mail packet is recorded bearing POST OFFICE BRITISH ARMY (code 'B' / Balaklava) datestamp on reverse addressed to Gibraltar. The five 1d. adhesives are also pen-cancelled (on board the Mail Packet from Constantinople?) and charged additional 5d. for the deficient amount for a letter by British Packet to Gibraltar. The address on both pen-cancelled letters may or may not be from the same sender. Copy with the lot.

We do concur that the address to the Union Bank of London, 4 Pall Mall, London with "A & N Club" at lower left was probably a request from the writer to the Bank to pay his annual dues for membership of the Army & Navy Club.

Provenance: Collection T.V. Roberts, RL, London, 26 April 1989, lot 2164.

Gibraltar-Spain Combination Frankings

On June 14, 1856, the Spanish Postmaster in San Roque informed Edmund Cresswell Jr., the Postmaster in Gibraltar that in future all mail addressed to destinations within Spain would have to be prepaid by Spanish stamps (the 2 d. Gibraltar rate was more frequently prepaid in cash). This continued until 1875 when, on Nov 25, an agreement between Spain and Gibraltar was signed allowing prepayment of letters with stamps of the country of origin.
